AL J. ADAMS, EDITOR OF SISSETON COURIER DIES

Sisseton, S. D., Nov. 28.—Al J. Adams, 49, editor and owner of the Sisseton Courier since 1923, died of a heart attack in his apartment here early Sunday morning.

Mr. Adams was born in Kent, Minn., and came to South Dakota in 1917. He was employed by the Reporter and Farmer, Websters weekly newspaper until he came to Sisseton. He bought the Courier from W. A. Wells, who now publishes a paper in Webster, and later purchased the old Sisseton Standard and combined it with the Courier.

Mr. Adams is survived by his widow and one son, John A. Adams, who is in the United States naval academy at Annapolis and one daughter, Cynthia Rose, 5.
